TO MAKE BUILDING BRICK FROM THE REFUSE OF MINES

"Red Dog" from Slack Piles to Be Used in this New Venture

MAKES A HIGH GRADE BRICK

The complete elimination of the unsightly piles of mine refuse, generally known as "slate," and when burned known as "Red Dog," is now only a matter of time, as a new process has been developed whereby this waste material can be made over into a high grade building brick, with a second grade fire brick to clean up any of the waste that might be left over.

For many years this "red dog" has been utilized for road repairs and has proven to be a good substitute for macadam on roads that are not too heavily traveled. Just now large quantities of this material are being used in this section of the county, in the way of improving roads, the prominent highway to be taken care of in this manner being the road between North CharleROI and Monongahela.

However, if the process which has been perfected by R. L. Taylor of Midway and through whose instrumentality a company has been formed to manufacture brick from this material proves to be a success, it will require thousands of tons of burned slate to take care of the demands which will be made in order to supply building needs. The company incorporated, known as the By-Product Brick & Engineering Company, has contracted with the Carnegie Coal company for their entire output of burned slate, including a site for a brick plant at Primrose, on the Panhandle. This company has been capitalized for $150,000, consisting of 15,000 shares of a par value of $10, all common stock. There is abundance of material of this character around the various mines in the county to provide brick making plants using this waste for years to come. It is estimated that the supply in the vicinity of Primrose will last the company operating there for a period of ten years.

Orders involving a considerable tonnage of coal have been placed in the Fayette county region within the past few days from cement mills, which are resuming operations. Are an Evidence that Members have Paid Dues in Chamber of Commerce

GOOD FOR OTHER PRIVILEGES

The Chamber of Commerce under the direction of the Membership Committee of which Mr. Tussing is Chairman, sent out on Wednesday a Membership Card to every person who has paid their dues for one or more quarters of the year 1921. The name of the holder appears upon the card and the time to which he has paid his dues. The President's name is printed upon the card and the Secretary signed his name in order to make the card authentic. On the back of the card are these words: "This card will admit the bearer to the club privileges of all Chambers of Commerce, Boards of Trade, Commercial Clubs, Civic and other organizations, with which the CharleROI Chamber of Commerce has reciprocal understandings, and will be recognized by the Telegraph Company the same as their own 'Collect' cards."

This card should be carried by its owner at all times and especially when travelling away from home as it entitles them to the privileges above mentioned. It also is an indication as to whether you are in good standing as a member of the Chamber. It will be a reminder as to the time of the expiration of dues and when that time arrives if you will return the card to the Chamber of Commerce and pay the additional dues, another card will be granted in its place.

The Membership Committee is also looking about for a suitable placard that may be displayed by each member in his office, workshop, or place of business. The Secretary-Manager has secured about twenty-five sample placards from the Chambers of Commerce from different parts of the country which have been examined by this committee who in turn will present their proposition to the Board of Directors on Thursday of this week. Some of these placards are made out of good substantial cardboard, some of celluloid, some of wood, and others of crystalloid. Many of these cards bear the following words: "Advertising, Charity and other solicitors must present a certificate of investigation" and also the words: "This card is to be returned upon request when membership conditions are violated." These placards will place in the hands of every member some tangible evidence that he or she is a member of the local Chamber of Commerce and will display it before the public in such a way as to advertise the Chamber.

The Membership Committee will hold its next regular meeting this evening at eight o'clock.

TARIFF BEFORE THE SENATE

News dispatches from Washington given general circulation indicate that there is a feeling among Republican leaders who have been following the tariff matters that the necessity for emergency legislation may be removed by the adoption of a resolution putting into effect an ad interim tariff. Such a proposal has been before the Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee and Finance Committee and was tentatively approved some weeks ago. Since that time some opposition has developed from members representing Western States who are clamoring for the immediate protection which they assert is afforded by the emergency measure.

The proposition is that Congress shall adopt a resolution to carry into effect the rates to be provided by the permanent tariff, which is expected to be reported to the House in the course of the next six weeks. These rates would continue in effect until the permanent measure is enacted into law. Senator Penrose declared that no amendments will be permitted in the strictly tariff provisions of the emergency measure. He hoped he said, to conclude the hearings on the anti-dumping and exchange features of the bill in a short time and that the bill may be reported to the Senate in the next ten days. It is conceded that there will probably be a long drawn out debate on the anti-dumping and exchange valuation provisions, and this is one of the principal reasons advanced by the leaders for the prediction that an ad interim tariff may be the form that temporary tariff legislation will take.

GRANDMOTHERS AND 'SMOKES'

The courts of Flatbush, N. Y., have deprived a grandmother of the custody of her grandchild because she smokes cigarettes. In effect this is a decision that a grandmother or any other woman who smokes cigarettes is guilty of an immoral act, or at least of a habit that unfits her for the charge or association with a child. It is not contended that the Flatbush lady is a 'cigarette fiend' the victim of a craving so abnormal that she may be classed with drug addicts. Apparently she offends merely by smoking cigarettes in moderation, a practice indulged in nowadays by many women of the highest respectability.

Three generations or more ago many thousands of American grandmothers sat in the corner and smoked corn-cob or clay pipes, and if their opinion could be handed down it would be highly interesting. What would they say of the Flatbush decision? For they did not regard themselves as guilty persons, they were altogether respectable, were venerated in their family circles, and many of them died "in the odor of sanctity," so to speak, notwithstanding their "smelly" pipes. Would their choice in "smokes" be regarded as less giddy and therefore be more acceptable to the Flatbush court? However that may be it is pretty safe to say that the majority of even the most conservative among us would prefer to see a grandmother puffing a cigarette than sucking the stem of a corn-cob or clay pipe, although her freedom of choice in the matter might be reluctantly respected.

When Dr. Stephen Smith of New York went recently off on a trip in February last to celebrate his 97th birthday a story was recalled as told by him when the physicians of his city gave a dinner in honor of his 90th anniversary. Dr. John P. Davin, who retold the story in the New York Herald, spoke of the dinner as "memorable in the history of American medicine" because Dr. Smith there revealed "the secret of his cure of lifelong indigestion," and went on to say: "The cure was due to President Cleveland who sent Dr. Smith to represent the United States at an international health congress in Paris. Arriving there with his indigestion and other infirmities aggravated by a sea voyage and by his enforced separation from his American diet list, he was induced by some eminent French sanitarians and servants to partake of a French dinner with its accompanying service of wine scientifically adjusted to the digestion of each course. The effect not only permanent but reconcilable with scientific principles." How Dr. Smith has contrived to keep on taking his "cure" since Congress has decreed a "dry" dinner for all is not stated.

This story is highly interesting from any point of view, whether those who read it are pleased or horrified. While some of the former will see in it confirmation of their own experience, the latter can at least find consolation in the fact that doctors differ and that what is one man's meat may be another man's poison.

SHAPING UP

The hospitalization program for wounded and sick soldiers is rapidly taking shape. The recommendation of Gen. Sawyer that Washington be the center for the work is meeting with wide approval. It is the general policy of the administration to develop and enlarge existing hospital facilities rather than to build entirely new institutions. Already there are in or near Washington the great Walter Reed Army hospital, St. Elizabeth's hospital, the Navy hospital, and a large Public Health Service hospital. They are all so situated as to lend themselves to extensive enlargement. Of course the headquarters of the Public Health Service and of the War and Navy medical divisions will remain in Washington, which fact adds to the desirability of making the National Capital the principal center for soldier relief.

Dickens' "Sairey Gamp" and her mythical friend are still widely remembered, but Harris, the dubiously self-confessed murder accomplice, probably thinks it a misprint when he sees himself referred to in the public prints as "Mrs. Harris."

Capablanca, Lasker and their chess board would show up just as well in a still picture, for the average audience in the film houses is too impatient to wait for a "move."

Jackie Coogan, the five-year old movie star who has just signed a $300,000 a year contract, will be a millionaire before he is ten if he can keep away from the candy counter.

It is proposed to change the name of Blackwell's island to Welfare island—of course without consulting the inmates, the majority of whom might vote for Hades.

WOMEN WANT TO KNOW REVISION

Realize State's Constitution is Not What It Should Be But Lack Information.

Philadelphia.—Mrs. Rudolph Blankenburg, widow of Philadelphia's great reform mayor, who takes an active interest in political affairs, said today that she believes the women voters of the state are taking a very keen interest in the problems of constitutional revision.

As Mrs. Blankenburg says, the women of the state are pretty much in the same boat as herself when it comes to a knowledge of what is best to do. "I believe in the need for a new constitution," she said, "I do not really know why, but I have been trying to find out. I read the new constitution drafted by the Governor's commission, and I am satisfied that the commission did the best they could for the state and I hope the way will open. It seems to me that if the Legislature will let us try we would make great progress."

"There are over 70,000 club women in Pennsylvania, and if these women can be reached they will be a mighty power to influence on this problem. Then also, the League of Women Voters is not at all slow in its plans for helping, for getting down even below the primaries and trying to make plans for a better political situation."

The state-wide development of a citizens' committee for constitutional revision, which is proceeding under the chairmanship of Mr. Franklin N. Brewer, of Warrington, will be one of the very potent means of spreading the knowledge of constitutional revision matters among voters of both sexes in every corner of the state. Mr. Brewer and his associates realize that the success of the entire vast undertaking depends upon the final vote of the people on the document that is to be presented to them for their approval or disapproval by the convention which it is hoped will be called after the September primary election.

CONSTITUTIONAL REVISION

The present State constitution has been in effect since its adoption in 1873. During the forty-seven years which have elapsed there have been great changes in business and economic conditions. To make it an effective instrument for the promotion of the welfare of the commonwealth, the constitution needs thorough revision. Such things as a proper budget system in the State, the abolition of certain useless offices, the taking of property for public use; all of these things, which were good things, the legislature has been prevented from doing along with the bad things.

The Constitutional Commission appointed under the act of June 4, 1919, and composed of men, leaders in their respective fields of activity, after a careful study of the provisions of the present constitution in the light of modern thought and conditions, have unanimously recommended the calling of a constitutional convention.

As the result of more than a year's labor the commission has prepared a proposed revised constitution embodying the changes in the present constitution which they regard as necessary.

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION A NECESSITY

The Constitutional Commission appointed by the Governor after going over the present constitution, article by article and section by section, has submitted its report to the legislature. A large number of substantial changes are recommended and, as the only practical method of accomplishing the revision, the report recommends that the question of holding a constitutional convention be submitted to a vote of the people.

The changes recommended are mainly changes in the machinery of government. They do not involve changes in the great principles under which the rights of men are safeguarded by our constitution. These changes would require the separate amendment of about a hundred sections, and the submission of these amendments to the voters would require a series of elections in which the voters would have to make too large a number of choices. Many of the recommendations are interdependent and the adoption of some and the rejection of others would produce most unfortunate results. This method is obviously out of the question. The calling of a constitutional convention remains. When a carefully selected commission, after more than a year of consideration, recommends many changes as being desirable in the constitution, it would be most unfortunate to find opposition to submitting to the people the question of calling a convention for further consideration and action.

THE FRANKLIN

Less Expense, Less Trouble, Better Service

Franklin economy is enough in itself to justify your choosing a Franklin these days. New conditions have given a new significance to the familiar Franklin figures below.

Yet economy was never the only aim—nor the only good result, of the Franklin. The principles behind it were adopted, and continued, for the superior service they gave in other ways, too.

Light weight makes the Franklin easier and safer to handle as well as more economical of gasoline; flexibility makes it more comfortable as well as easier on tires; direct air cooling frees it from the annoyance as well as from the expense of radiator troubles.

FIRM REGISTRATION ACT IS CONSTRUED

Of widespread interest to the business world is a decision handed down in the Superior Court on Monday in the case of Mason A. Moyer, William H. Carpenter and David C. Miller, trading as Moyer & Carpenter, appellants, against Ralph Kennedy, in which the court construes the so-called "fictitious names" act of 1917, requiring firms doing business under a fictitious name to register the names and addresses of all the members of the firm, with the secretary of the Commonwealth and the prothonotary of the county where it does business.

The court in its decision gives a broad construction of the act and holds that where the firm name gives the names of two partners and there is one or more silent partners, it is a fictitious name, and unless the firm is properly registered the court will not entertain a suit brought by it.

To this decision three Judges, William D. Porter, John B. Head and W. H. Keller, dissented. The question came to the Superior Court on appeal from common pleas court No. 1 of Philadelphia, the decision affirming the judgment of the court below.

NEW FIRE MACHINE FOR MONONGAHELA

The Monongahela City fire department received its new combination fire truck and pump on Saturday last and during the past few days a number of demonstrations have been given under the auspices of a representative of the Seagraves company of Columbus, Ohio, which furnishes the machine. One of the big features of the new machine, is a powerful centrifugal pump, capable of throwing approximately 1,000 gallons of water every minute, and of maintaining three streams of water on any burning building.

The truck is also equipped with the necessary chemical outfit, as well as the usual accessories which go with such a machine, and its addition to the Monongahela department gives that city exceptional facilities for fighting fires. Tuesday evening a demonstration was given on the hill district of Monongahela, and the work done by the engine was in every way up to the expectations of the fire department.

She Wasn't Sick, But Her Children Were

Six Months of Care and Worry Were Too Much For Her

GOT THIN. NERVOUS. TIRED

Her Brother-in-Law, a Doctor, Said "She Was Anemic, and Advised Pepto-Mangan"

Here is a story of a strong, vigorous mother who never knew what ill-health was. But three years ago her two little boys got into the habit of being sick.

Six months of care and worry were too much for her and brought to light the fact, that with all her apparent vigor, she really was anemic. She lost flesh, couldn't sleep well and got nervous.

Then the doctor (her brother-in-law) prescribed Pepto-Mangan.

She said: "Fred explained a lot about the special sort of iron-content in Pepto-Mangan and a lot of other things that I don't understand, but what I do understand is that a bottle of Pepto-Mangan is always going to be in my medicine closet as long as I live. Whatever it contains I don't know or care, but I do know that it builds me up when I get run down and that's enough for me."

Gude's Pepto-Mangan is an absolutely dependable red-blood builder in all conditions of lowered vitality not due to serious disease of the vital organs. It improves the appetite, imparts color to the cheeks, and creates new hope and ambition in those who have become pale, weak, and listless. Physicians recommend Gude's Pepto-Mangan. When you order, be sure the word "Gude's" is on the package. Without "Gude's" it is not Pepto-Mangan. Furnished in both liquid and tablet form. For sale by druggists. Adv.

The Monongahela Valley Country Club will open the season of 1921 with an informal dinner dance at the club house, in Carroll township, this evening. A very general attendance of members is expected, as it has been almost six months since activities ceased at this popular social center. The Board of Directors have also adopted a series of house rules, which have been posted at the club house, which shows what the privileges of the members are concerning the use of the property of the club. These rules, together with the by-laws will later be published in book form and each member given a copy.

The golf links also open officially today, although there was some playing last Saturday. However, from this day on the summer activities at the club will be on in full swing, and the members hope to make it one of enjoyment and good fellowship.

WHO OWNS ISLE?

Gem of the Pacific Is Without a Proprietor.

Englishman Originally Leased It From the British Government, and It Is Well Worth Having

Palmerston Island (in south Pacific, between Society Islands and Samoa) was a welcome sight, as welcome as it was unique. It is doubtful if such another gem adorns the earth. Neither atoll nor island, it is a perfect combination of both, a natural necklace of surf pounded coral strung with six, equidistant verdant islets, the whole inclosing a shallow lagoon slashed with unbelievable color.

Such was Palmerston as we approached it before a stiff southeast "trade," to be welcomed by a fleet of amazingly fast luggers and their astonished crews, Ralph Stock writes in the National Geographic Magazine. "Who were we? Where had we sprung from? Had we any matches?"

To our astonishment, the questions were fired at us in English and, what was more, English of a vaguely familiar pattern. It is a strange thing to hear one's own tongue fluently banded among a brown-skinned people on an isolated speck of earth in mid-Pacific.

I have Palmerston Island securely pigeonholed in my mind as the spot of all others in which, when the time comes, to sit down and wait for the end.

The outside world, in the shape of a schooner from the Cook group, intrudes itself but once a year. The lagoon and its neighboring islets are a mine of interest to the naturalist or sportsman, and the people have a simple charm that is all their own.

Many years ago one John Masters leased Palmerston Island from the British government, and, not believing in half-measures, took unto himself three native wives. By each he had a large and healthy family, which he reared in strict accordance with his own standards of social usage. That they were sound standards is evidenced in the people of Palmerston today. They read, write and speak English; this last with an accent vaguely reminiscent of the southwest of England. They are courteous, hospitable and honest to a degree nothing short of startling, these days, and, although naturally inbred, they do not show it, either mentally or physically.

One thing alone troubles the John Masters of today. To whom do he and his island belong? The war has changed all things. The Cook group, of which Palmerston has been declared a free-fung unit, is administered by New Zealand. Is Masters to be taxed, governed and generally harried by a people who hardly existed when his father took over Palmerston? It looks like it.

Grander in Storm.

Indian thunderstorms are notoriously violent, though comparatively harmless. According to Mount Stuart Elphinstone, the setting in of the monsoon in India is accompanied by such an electric convulsion "as can scarcely be imagined by those who have not seen that phenomenon in a temperate climate."

"It generally begins with violent blasts of wind, which are succeeded by floods of rain. For some hours lightning is seen almost without intermission; sometimes it only illuminates the sky and shows the clouds near the horizon; at others it discovers the distant hills, and again leaves all in darkness, when in an instant it reappears in vivid and successive flashes and exhibits the nearest objects in all the brightness of day."

"During all this time the distant thunder never ceases to roll and is only silenced by some nearer peal, which bursts on the ear with such a sudden and tremendous crash as can scarcely fail to strike the most insensible heart with awe."—Scientific American.

Labor Obligatory in Bulgaria.

According to information from Sofia, Bulgaria has passed a law by which labor is obligatory, both for men and women. This later can be utilized in many ways, including the construction of roads, railways, canals, aqueducts, improvement of rivers and streams, installation of telephone and telegraph lines, preparation of various building materials, the planting and exploitation of forests, work in the various domains of the state, district or communes, cultivation of kitchen gardens, raising of silk worms and of bees and cattle, fisheries, work in mines and factories, conservation of food products, weaving, etc. The demobilization of the Bulgarian army by virtue of the recent treaty has rendered this law necessary.

Chose an Easier Day.

Harriet had the days of the week for a spelling lesson. All went well, except "Wednesday," which it seemed impossible for her to learn. Being fond of an auntie, she was promised a visit if she would write, telling her she would come Wednesday. But to no avail, so in despair she said: "I won't go Wednesday. I'll go some day I can spell in writing, like maybe Monday or Friday."

Yule Log Once Preserved.

In older times the Yule log was always laid aside before it was burned out, so that the next Christmas day the new Yule log might be lighted from the charred remains of its predecessor.

BRIDE SCOURGES HER MATE

Girls of Native Tribe of Portuguese West Africa Enjoy Their Last Hours of Freedom.

The marriage market is a recognized institution among the Konyama people of southwestern Africa. They belong to the Bantu race and the Ovambo tribe, inhabiting a little-known district of South Africa, Portuguese West Africa.

The marriage festivities, called Etumukura, are divided into three stages, the first taking place in summer time, and the last two during the autumn harvest season. The marriageable girls dance before the white tribe, and the men select their mates, but wait until the third stage before naming them. After the second stage, in which the dancing by the girls has continued for two days and nights, the prospective bride has a dried palm leaf tied around her wrist by her prospective husband. He then hoists her on his shoulder, and carries her away about 20 yards. He puts her down, and female attendants give her two sticks with which to whip the man as he runs away. After this incident the bride all return to their kraals, cover themselves with white ashes, and go off on their honeymoon. During the trip they do pretty much as they like. They sing and dance and extort gifts from any men who have courted them. They also pounce on any man who assaults them, and unite in beating him with clubs.

HOW BLAINE SAVED GARFIELD

Small Circumstances That for the Time Preserved the President From Assassin's Blow.

Due to the seemingly small detail that he was admitted promptly to the home of Secretary Blaine when calling the evening preceding the President's assassination, James A. Garfield probably owes his life of 190 to 12 hours longer.

On the evening of July 2, 1881, the President, as he approached the Blaine home was espied by the secretary, who was seated at a window. Blaine hurried to the door and had it opened when Garfield arrived at the threshold. In the light of evidence brought out at the trial, Guiteau was dogging the President's footsteps that evening and intended to fire when he waited for the Blaine door to be opened.

Blaine walked home with the President and the assassin, again lying in wait, could not bring himself to fire in the dual presence. Before the two parted it was arranged that Blaine should accompany the President next morning to the railway station. The President intended to leave for William College to attend an anniversary celebration.

Soon after the arrival of the presidential party at the waiting room of the old Sixth street station of the Pennsylvania railroad Sixth and B streets, Guiteau fired the shot that caused Garfield's death.

Gasoline Respectability.

Gigantic society on the edge of the Sahara supports a magnificent garage. In towns, sprung up many hundred miles apart, in the wilderness of British Columbia, isolated except for the two steel rails of the transcontinental railroad, the well-to-do import automobiles for driving up and down the half-dozen miles which comprise Main street. Motoring is evidently an event of importance, even when a complete circuit of all the available roadway takes less than a half hour. Then there is always the pleasure and satisfaction to be found in repetition. Indeed, enthusiasm for motoring in several of these towns has led to the formation of automobile clubs, thriving organizations which differ little from their prototypes in other places except in showing a shade more interest in varnish, let us say, and a shade less in gasoline.

I had an experience with the mesmeric power of a rattler in southern California which may interest hunters. I was out shooting California quail with a favorite dog of mine, an Irish red setter. I missed the dog when walking up a hill and whistled for him. Thinking he must have got a point, I walked back and looked down into the valley, where I saw him sitting about 300 yards off. I thought it was very odd, for there was no cover there, and it puzzled me. I knew there could be no birds there. So I walked up to the dog. When I got about fifty yards off I then ran in, watching him, and when about fifteen yards off I saw a big rattlesnake also watching his head. I aimed at the dog, who then stepped back, and I shot the rattler, blowing him off the ground. Letter in The Field.

Best-Furnishing Tree.
In Canada and eastern United States the larch, a sturdy tree which belongs to the pine family, often grows 50 or 60 feet high, and is generally known as hackmatack, while in the Central states it is called tamarack. The European variety is even taller and has longer leaves which don beautiful autumn tints before falling. "The tamarack will go up the hillside," says a writer. "It can live on dry land, but it loves the swamp best of all. If, perchance, a small lake has so far dried up that a thin coating of soil covers it the tamarack creeps down and takes possession and soon the result is a tamarack swamp." On account of its long, tapering form, the tree is extremely useful for masts in sailing vessels, telegraph poles and a variety of purposes, and as it is common from the Arctic circle to the United States, it is easily found for the especial use for which it is adapted.—Christian Science Monitor.

Wage Stick Battles.

Single combat in various forms survives all over the world, and different peoples have different methods of showing their prowess. In the island of Trinidad, for instance, the natives, who speak a mixture of French patois and English, call their method "playing boys" (literally stick fighting). The stick used is about a yard long and usually made from the "puie" tree, a very hard wood. This is held at each end diagonally in front of the body, and the blows are struck by releasing one hand and striking with either the left or the right. In the carnival season bands from the various districts are made up and contests take place whenever two bands meet. The stick-men are extraordinarily clever at parrying blows, and an expert will stop a cricket ball thrown at him.—Exchange.

Haunted Mountain.

The Matterhorn, in the Swiss Alps, enjoys a sinister reputation—although its fascination has lured many first-class climbers and guides to their death. Its conquest by climbers in 1865—just over 35 years ago—recalls the thrilling story of how on their exultant return from the summit the rope which tied the party together snapped, and four men were dashed over a 1,000 feet precipice. Lord Francis Douglas, Rev. Charles Hudson, Mr. D. Hadow and a guide were killed instantly, the bodies of the last three now resting side by side with many other mountaineers in the little churchyard at Zermatt. The body of Lord Francis Douglas has never been found.

Men Short in France.

The average height for men is 5 feet 5 inches, and for women is 5 feet 2 inches. The observation indicates that $5.10 per cent of the French people have chestnut hair. The blonds are next in order, forming only 12.22 per cent of the population. Pure black hair is found in 1.81 per cent—that is slightly more frequently than red hair, which altogether was found in only 0.72 per cent of cases. Pure black hair, so rare in France, is the rule in certain Mediterranean countries (for instance, in definite regions of Spain).

NECKTIE HALTED A ROMANCE

Lovers Who Had Been Apart for Forty Years Made Up When Man Wore Woman's Present.

Forty years ago John Emmons and Clara Timmons of Bishopville, Del., were twenty years old and sweethearts. With her own hands Miss Timmons made a necktie as a gift for her young gallant. The evening of the day he received it Emmons put it on. He didn't like the colors and refused it.

As usual, he visited Miss Timmons that evening, according to a Seelyville (Del.) dispatch to the Philadelphia Ledger. It was a nice summer night. The moon revealed that he was not wearing love's token and Miss Timmons demanded the reason.

"It's too loud," replied the youth.

"Do you mean you will never wear it? Then you don't love me," sobbed the girl, and she went into the house.

That apparently was the end of the romance. Emmons went to Portland, Ore., and prospered. As the owner of a big department store in the far Northwestern city, he returned to Bishopville last Christmas for a visit.

It was inevitable that he should meet his former sweetheart in the village. Soon each learned that the old love would not die; that each had considered the other the only mate and neither had married.

Of course, Emmons proposed. Miss Timmons did not refuse him, but she bought a tie as nearly like the one that started all the trouble as she could find. Then, when he wore it "without finching, she coyly murmured 'yes.' And so they were married the other evening.

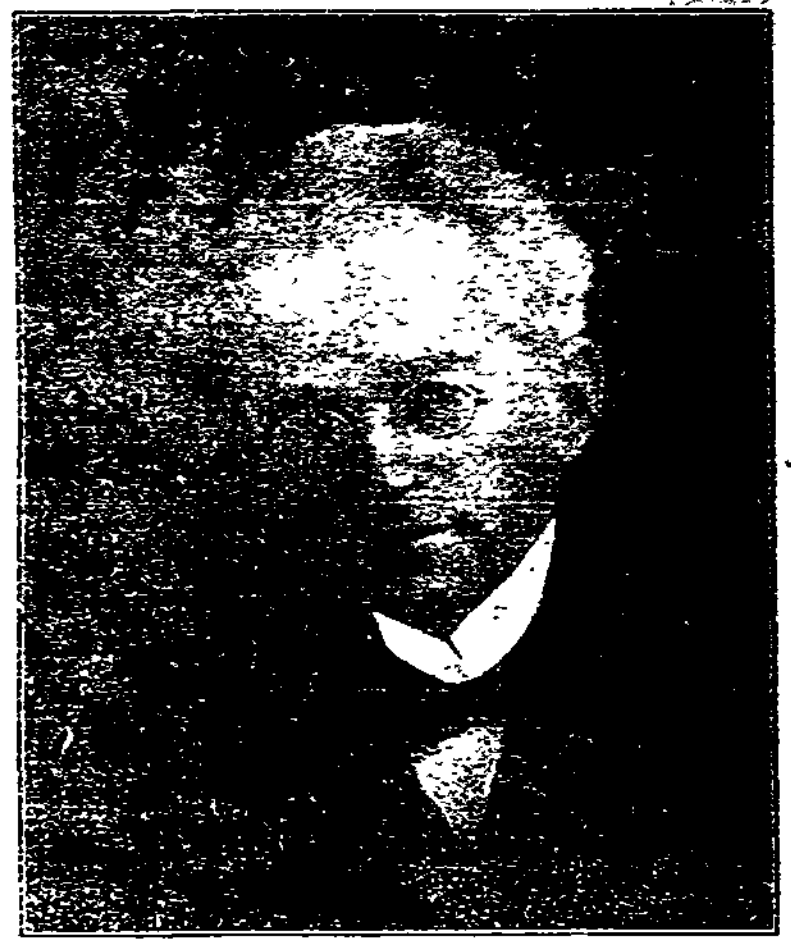

PREPARING TURF FOR FUEL

New Method, Said to Have Originated in Russia, May Result in Relieving Shortage.

A new method of drying turf to relieve the serious fuel shortage in Finland has been put in operation in various Scandinavian countries. The new method was invented by engineers working under orders from the Russian soviet government, to find a more labor-saving method of preparing turf as fuel for the great central power station near Moscow, the process being made known in Finland through an escaping engineer. The fundamental principle of the process is quite simple. The raw turf in the swamp, by a powerful jet of water under a pressure of 20 atmospheres, is freed from all old roots and changed to thin mud. This is pumped out on a drying field and spread in layers. When sufficiently dry it is cut into bricks of uniform size by means of a tractor. The turf pump is constructed like an ordinary water turbine, is reversible with aid of electric motor, is equipped with a cutting apparatus which completes the work of the water jet, and can be raised or lowered as the surface of the mud varies. The entire equipment is mounted on a car which can be pushed forward or backward on rails along the line of work.—Scientific American.

There are loads that help as well as loads that hinder. The first we should cheerfully take up, and the latter resolutely cast off. The easiest time to do a disagreeable duty is when we first decide it is a duty. CRUDOLEUM

THE GUARANTEE REMEDY FOR HAIR AND SCALP TROUBLES

Stubborn cases of itching irritated scalp are easily overcome by Crudoleum. It is a harmless, high grade light amber petroleum, which has been tried and proven to be especially adapted for removing dandruff and other causes of falling, fading hair. Able authorities have proved this fact by many convincing trials.

As time rolls on, the public, after using many different remedies for hair care and ridding the scalp of disease and dandruff, are returning to petroleum, but to the higher, cleaner grade, and not to the thick, dark, muddy looking petroleum which are apt to contain suspended particles of unsanitary substances, and light color is what is making it lime, free carbon or free sulphur. This accounts for the possibility that a few who have used a common grade are telling their friends about it. If you are unable to get it from your of petroleum on the scalp may have done so without much success. We offer you Crudoleum, believing it is the best grade obtainable for the purposes for which we recommend it and you get to appreciate it as soon as you use it. It is a harmless application that is rapidly finding its way into the homes of the people. The price is only 35c for a half pint bottle. Get a bottle today at F. J. John; he is authorized to return the purchase price if you are not satisfied after giving Crudoleum a fair trial. The antiseptic, healing powers of Crudoleum and its clean, sparkling appearance particles of unsanitary substances, and light color is what is making it lime, free carbon or free sulphur. This accounts for the possibility that a few who have used a common grade are telling their friends about it. Wilkesburg Station, Pittsburg, Pa.
